Update your branch one last time.

The screenshot shows a GitHub repository interface for 'reprorehab2025', which is a public fork of 'ohspc89/reprorehab2025'. The repository is currently on the 'students' branch. A notification banner indicates that the branch is '2 commits ahead of, 1 commit behind' the upstream repository. Below this, there are buttons for 'Contribute' and 'Sync fork'. A modal dialog box is open, titled 'This branch is out-of-date', explaining that the branch needs to be updated to merge the latest changes from the upstream repository. It notes that discarding 2 commits would make the branch match the upstream, but 2 commits would be removed. The dialog provides a link to 'Learn more about syncing a fork' and two buttons: 'Discard 2 commits' and 'Update branch'. The 'Update branch' button is highlighted with a red oval. On the left sidebar, there are links to 'contents', 'submission', and 'README.md'. On the right, there are links to 'About', 'Play', 'MATLAB', 'space', and 'program'.
